

The consumer banking industry has direct mail access and substantial resources to reach its market without need to impose on consumers' privacy through telemarketing. I, therefore, oppose granting any exception or relief which would weaken Indiana's telephone privacy law. The case for relief is outweighed by the harm it will cause.